BREAKS THE RECORD.

This Is the Hottest June 18 We Have Had Since 1877.

From 74 at 8 A. M., the Mercury Jumped to 86 at 1 O'Clock.

Prostrations and Accidents Caused by Old Sol's Rays.

This is the hottest June 18 in New York City since 1877, when the mercury scored 85 at the hottest part of the day. To-day that mark was reached at 12.30 and passed one degree at 1 o'clock. During the noon hour the heat was particularly intense, assisted as it was by beavy, humid atmosphere. Private meters in the streets were studied by hundreds of sweltering citizens, and were found to scale an average closely approximating 90.

"The Evening World's" record below is taken from the Government instru-ment in the Equitable Building tower, and is official. Owing to their elevated and airy location, they are always a few degrees lower than those in the On this, the anniversary day of the merry didoes. Early in the morning it bounded up nine degrees in an hour and fell back nearly half that many points in

The observation was taken at that hour, and the officer in charge was amazed to see the indicate suddenly begin a soaring career and mount up and up until, as the Trinity Church clock banged 9, this devoted city lay under a blanket of 83 degrees.

It seemed that the sunshine aloft and the furnaces below had combined to hold a grand terrestial bake, but just at the climax a cloud appeared from somewhere and the fluid in the tube began to fall. It/dropped back four degrees, and at 10 o'clock rested at 79.

All this was merely a diversion, a sor of capricious prejude, to the business of the top floors of the thermometer.

T. Dunn thinks that the heat will love 90. Here is what he has to say bout this hot day in general and parcular.

about this hot day in general and particular:

"A warm wave is covering all the sountry east of the southern lake regions. There were showers last night everywhere within that limit except over the immediate coast line. The temperature is uniform over the warm area. Boston is four degrees and Jacksonville, Fla., two degrees warmer than we are, white Buffalo and Washington are exactly even with us.

"At 8 o'clock this morning the temperature here registered 74; Boston and Philadelphia, 78; Buffalo, Cleveland, Washington and Norfolk, 74; Chicago, 60; St. Louis, 72; Jacksonville, Fla., 76, and San Francisco, 52. The hottest spot was at Titusville, Fla., with 80 degrees, and the coolest at Marquette, Mich., with 48.

"It is going to get warmer here to-day and 90 will doubtless be reached. The day may terminate with a thunder shower. That kind of a disturbance is imminent. It will be a local one and may be put off until to-night.

"It is more than uncomfortable owing to the high percentage of humidity, which at 8 o'clock scored 80 per cent. We have a morning breeze from the South of about eight miles an hour. This is apt to veer to the West and Northwest to-morrow with cooling results, but indications do not warrant a prophecy of relief until to-morrow night. I think that about that time we may look for some of the cool weather they are getting about Chicago."

This promises to be the hottest 18th of June we have had since 1877, when it was 85 degrees.

It was a fine day for outing yesterday, just as Mr. Dunn promised on Saturday it would be. It was hot in town, sure enough, but those who plucked up courage to get to the seashore or the country were rewarded by cool breezes. There was a uniform wind of eight miles an hour right in town. The thermometer struck its highest altitude at 89 degrees along about 4 o'clock.

Mayor Gilroy, who spent the day at Rockaway, said that towards evening the sea breeze grew so fresh that he found it more comfortable.

The following cases of prostration from heat were reported to-day:

William Alfers, twenty-five years old nours, and who lives at 1773 First avenue attempted suicide by cutting his throat with a caseknife early this morning. Alfers has been employed as driver for Lord & Taylor for the past twelve years. Several years ago he met Georgia Sweeney, of Brooklyn. He became attentive to her, and a few months ago their engagement was announced. Miss Sweeney is an orphan, just past Yesterday morning Alfers asked his wife to draw some more money from her uncle. She told him she could not and a quarrel ensued. In his anger Alfers said: 'I am sorry I married.

Later in the day he became morose and despondent. The couple retired at 9 o'clock last evening. At 5.30 o'clock this morning the young bride called to her husband to get up. She received no response, and, looking closely at him, saw blood on his face. He had drawn the bed clothes about his chin.

She drew the covers back and discovered that his throat was gashed in three places and that he was bleeding. Two case-knives and a pocket-knife, all stained with blood, were found on the bureau.
